Corporate TEAM building and evaluation

You can observe your team while resolving tasks:

- Who is taking the lead?
- Who has the brightest ideas?
- Who combines the outcome and leads it to the final result?
- Who is going into the nitty-gritty details?
- Who is leaning back watching the effort of the group?
- Who is at the group's service?
- Who is working closely together with one or more colleagues?
- Who is arguing with whom?
- Who has the biggest ego? And so on...

By observing you will find out who is good at what kind of tasks and who works well together. You might find out, that some people are talented and interested in very different areas than the ones they have to cover in daily working life executing their jobs.

Maybe you even realize that you made two people team up for a task or a project that simply don't work together very well.
